/HAVE YOU SEEN THIS?

Marc Dulude's work explores the concept of landscape and its representation. He builds formal labyrinths that are based on an interplay between the visible and the invisible, the perceptible and the sublime, all the while seeking to break down nature behind a delicate veil: the mirror. His playful performative sculptures, videos, and photographs invite viewers to (re)think nature itself and challenge our perception of it — it is not strictly about representing trees and lakes, but about showing a different way of immersing ourselves in and relating to an environment.
